by the "Prisoner in Spain" are believed to be that many others of a similar nature have been finding ready victims. A photograph, like the one above, is evidence of the writer's genuineness to the writer's assertion. That of any girl whose relative is in a prison.

er which at the September 28. My Dear of Mr. [redacted] writer of [redacted] ask Mr. [redacted] of his [redacted] pensioner is daugh- at. that he General [redacted] eyer as [redacted] refused to accompany him, and as [redacted] not favor the policy of General [redacted] joined the insurgent army. As the result of a treason, so the [redacted] go on to relate, he was obliged to [redacted] grate to England, taking with him [redacted] equivalent to £30,000, which is about [redacted] 900.

WANTED GUARDIAN FOR CH [redacted] While in England the writer of this [redacted] ter received the news of the death [redacted] wife, he claims, leaving "the daughter [redacted] despair and without help in this sad [redacted] tion." He then decided to go to [redacted] for his daughter and to bring her [redacted] United States.

She [redacted] then [redacted] to the [redacted]

gent to take along with him this respectable sum of money secured in place in the London Bank against an special contract and only as a deposit as it appears in the certificate of the bank, and he knows that the bank gave him as a guarantee, a document which he in a concealed hollow way had obtained, and in which the most keenest eyes cannot find out.

The letter then goes on to state that the writer went on to Spain for his daughter, but that she was not to be seen there, the military Government of Carthage and condemned to eighteen years' penal servitude in the city of Valague before he is deprived of all communication with his daughter and his wife.

When he was sentenced, the writer states, his luggage and the portmanteau containing his money were taken away from him for the payment of the costs of the arrest and trial.

Then, the writer of the letter says, he is visited only by the chaplain, whom he has taken into his confidence. The chaplain tells him that the Government of Mr. Treat became the protector of the writer, and with a covert request that Mr. Treat advance money to pay the costs of the legal process and thus secure the writer's freedom.

He is promised a suitable reward. The letter also states that the writer is informed that the Government of Mr. Treat, and that all correspondence must be carried on through the servant of the Government.

Needless to say, Mr. Treat did not condescend to be the protector of his alleged niece, nor did he advance money to redeem the baggage said to contain the money.

SULLIVAN MAN GETS LEAFER.

The next person to receive a letter telling of a hidden fortune was B. Louder of Sullivan, Mo.

The first paragraph of this letter reads as follows:

"My Dear Relative: Having been told by a honest man, who you, but for my reference, know you, my dear wife, Mary Louder, your relative, gave me, that you, my dear wife, had a hidden fortune in your family, please to send me your good qualities that distinguish you from the rest of the world."

A few days later another letter was received from the prisoner, waiting for the announcement of the death of the former Secretary to General Campos. This letter was written in the name of the prisoner, and was in the will of the prisoner and of its terms. The letter also detailed the steps the alleged prisoner had taken to secure the release of the baggage, and urged haste.

Another letter was soon received, dated May 10, 1904, from the same prisoner. Father Sullivan says that this will is the only one that has been received. The share of the alleged fortune was said to be one-fourth.

The next letter was received by Mr. Louiers, this time from the alleged daughter of the dead prisoner. The letter was written in the name of the alleged black border and began, "My dear uncle." In the letter she intimated what is said to be the real name of the prisoner.

Mr. Louiers was inclined to believe in the truth of the alleged fortune, but placed the matter in the hands of Father Sullivan for investigation. The investigation has not yet been completed, but the whole thing is a swindle, he says. He is familiar with Spanish law and cannot understand why, if the story is genuine, such secrecy should be enjoined, or why it would be necessary to pay $700 to the alleged daughter.

A. L. Dyke, of the A. L. Dyke Automobile Company, who is in the city, has also received fortune-telling letters, but, however, at Barcelona, May 29, 1904. This letter was dated Barcelona, May 29, 1904, at Barcelona; that his trunk containing $50,000 francs, is in a railway station in Barcelona, and that he would like to see the trunk Mr. Dyke must go to Barcelona, pay the customs duty on a bag belonging to him, and then he can get the bag secure the check for the trunk.

The letter also states that there is a certificate for 5,000 francs, and $35,000 is in the bag, and that 25,000 francs is necessary to release it.

So far, as known, no one has lost any money, but the letters are so full of promises but it is thought that many besides those who have told of the letters, were re-

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.

New York, July 18.—Sophia Halpin, 5 years old, of No. 68 East One Hundred and Tenth street, was run over by a heavy delivery wagon while playing in front of her home.

Unknown to the driver, Peter Weber, of No. 30 West One Hundred and Tenth, who crawled under the wagon to recover a baseball just as he was about to start.

When the driver saw the child under the wagon he stopped, but Weber willingly gave himself up.

Washington Correspondent Corrects Erroneous Impression Concerning Charges for Accommodations for World's Fair Visitors.

Correspondents of out-of-town newspapers who came to St. Louis to report the National Negro Labor Council convention had much to correct the impression that seemed to have gone abroad generally that there is an organized effort among the hotel, restaurant and boarding-house keepers to gouge the Negro workers for extortionate prices for accommodations.

Relative to this, J. Martin Miller, the executive secretary of the National Negro Labor Council (N. N. L. C.) News, had the following to say in a letter to his paper:

"St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 19, 1935. It can be said that the hotel and boarding-house keepers have not advanced the rates as much as they could have. But it is not fair to say for people of moderate means to visit the World's Fair. Even during the week of the convention, the rates were not excessive. The hotel rates here were much more reasonable than in other cities. The N. N. L. C. is not an convention. This was a surprise to those who came direct from the Republic. The hotel and boarding-house keepers of the hotels would be inclined to take undue advantage of the situation. Notwithstanding the over-crowded condition of the hotels during the convention, and the fact that they were turning away guests by the hundreds, the hotel and boarding-house trably less than at Chicago. It is true that at the present time the leading hotels are charging a slight advance in the rates and in some instances the class of accommodations is being improved. The class of two beds in a room and two compelling guests to double up. In that case they get double the rates of the other rooms.

"Thousands of residences in St. Louis are boarding-houses. The second, third and fourth class, as nearly as their rank can be determined, are more comfortable and more satisfactory than the regular hotels and are very much more economical.

"The city has a bureau of information, a catalogue in which they register 3,000 of 4,000 of these boarding-houses and hotels. They charge from $1.00 to $1.50 a week; for board and room from $2.00 to $3.00 a week. There are hundreds of residences where you can get a good breakfast, meals can be had as low as 15 cents. For those who do not care to pay more, 25 cents will get you a good breakfast, and part of the city.

"The price of admission into the grounds is very low. It is possible for a visitor to live fairly well, without any luxuries, of course, for $1 to $1.50 a day, or adding 50 cents for a car, for $1.50 to $2.00 for five days. The World's Fair is not open on Sundays or on Thursdays. If the visitor desires to see the grounds, the best way is to go with the Fair. He could spend money every hour from 10 o'clock until 10 o'clock, and see the great exhibits of our Government, the several States and the different countries of the world as free as the air.

"The World's Fair is the greatest and
